

Message from Commander, Navy Region Southeast

"Now that Hurricane Isaac has moved inland from the Gulf of Mexico, I want to share with the members of the Southeast Region team my appreciation for the highly professional preparation and response to the first hurricane to touch our shores since 2008. As the storm approached our bases in the Caribbean, every installation along the Gulf braced for the storm. When Isaac finally struck near New Orleans, it quickly became clear that each installation and all of their tenants had worked diligently to ensure personnel safety and protection of government property.

As we enter the recovery phase of this incident, I want to emphasize that safety remains paramount. There is still a potential for injuries, whether from downed power lines, localized flooding, or other hazards. Please be sure to follow the instructions of your local emergency management officials and safety personnel as you work to restore normal operations. Thank you for the outstanding job that you have done to date and please make safety your top priority as we move forward."

Bravo Zulu!

RDML Jack Scorby, Commander, Navy Region Southeast.
